I wouldn't, the young man thought. But he did not say it. He went on .reading the reviews, unfolding them and folding them up again and putting them back in the envelope. The girl sat opening envelopes and reading her letters without interest. Then she looked out of the cafe at the sea. Her face was a dark gold brown and she had brushed her hair straight back from her forehead the way the sea had pulled it when she had come out of the water and where it was .cropped close and on her cheeks the sun had burned it to white gold against the brown of her skin. She looked out at the sea and her eyes were very sad. Then she went back to opening letters. There was one long typewritten one that she read with concentration. Then she went on opening and reading the other letters. The young man looked at her and thought she looked a little as though she were shelling peas. 'What was in th~ letters?' the youngman asked. 'There were checks in some.' 'Big ones?' 'Two.' 'That's fine,' he said. 'Don't go away like that.. You always said it never made any difference.' 'Have I said anything?'
